OCPanteras October Blog

I enjoy touring private vintage car collections.....probably about 20 collections this year. They've ranged from two car home garages with three cars stuffed into them, to a three story mega-collection that included an art gallery and library, as well as full restoration shop with everything including a modern filtered spray booth. OCPanteras has had the opportunity to enjoy two of those collections earlier this year. We visited Don Murray's Collection in Irvine, and Rick Lorenzen's Collection in Dominguez Hills.

One collection I visited this month was Dr. Fred Simeone's Collection of vintage race cars. It's housed in an old 100,000sqft manufacturing building near an airport. I don't know how many millions his collection is worth, but one of the cars is the Shelby Daytona Coupe prototype. I don't think this car has any race history. It was built to figure out how to build the 5 race cars that would go on to win the World Sports Car Championship. Still, I think he paid $7MM for it! Dr Simeone led the tour through his entire collection, including the 1938 Alfa Romeo 8C 2900B, his favorite car. This is generally considered a generational car; so rare and so valuable, they only come up for sale once in a generation. Similar cars have sold for $20MM. At the end of our tour Fred got both cars out and drove them around behind the building so we could see and hear them driving.

A friend asked if I feel jealous when I see these collections. That thought never occurred to me. I'm just so excited to see the cars and the venues. Like Don and Rick, Fred is passionate about the cars he collects and shares them generously with people like you and me. I'm happy they saved and restored and share the cars with us! Happy...happy...happy!

Jokes for Car Guys

My Pantera has a three-position light switch:
dim, flicker and off!

I'm fine with that, but with the switch in the dim position, the temp gauge only reads hot!
